The city of Newark, New Jersey has a fascinating and well-documented history. Yet there is one group whose undeniable contribution to the city's life has rarely been the subject of historical or academic study -- Newark's LGBT community. The Queer Newark Oral History Project will rectify this omission by recording and preserving interviews with a wide range of LGBT Newark residents. The project will be launched at a conference, Queer Newark: Our Voices, Our Histories, to be held on Nov. 12th, 2011, in Newark. Hear organizers and panelists talk about the conference and the project at this October 21st roundtable discussion.
