

But where are you really from?

Statistically speaking, I'm just a statistic

Not white enough, not Mexican enough

What is your experience of race and/or ethnicity at Rutgers?

Join us for an info session and food:
Graduate Student Lounge (College Ave Campus, behind the Au Bon Pain)
Wednesday, October 19th from 6:00-7:00 PM

The Center for Race & Ethnicity invites you to an Information Session for "Who RU: Documenting Diversity"!

Come and share:

- How do you define your identity?
- What is an experience that made you who you are?
- What can't someone tell just by looking at you?

Rutgers University has one of the most diverse student bodies in the nation—The Center for Race and Ethnicity (CRE) wants to know: how do you define your identity beyond mere statistics?

We are launching a new initiative to explore how Rutgers students experience race and ethnicity that will involve video recordings, collected photographs, art works, poetry, and prose.

If you are interested in sharing your experience, want to submit works or narratives, or just want some free food and good company, come join us! FREE delicious snacks and drinks!

RSVP for the event and email us questions, submissions, or thoughts at: Raceethnicity@sas.rutgers.edu
